Crack 1.04 BATThe present invention relates generally to the dissipation of electromagnetic energy. More particularly, it relates to the generation of polarized magnetic fields. The generation of a magnetic field is used in a variety of applications including material separation, telecommunications, and military applications. The most common sources for the generation of magnetic fields are electrical generators or powered motors. However, these magnetic fields are weak and require relatively large size coils and complex electronics for control. Due to the weak magnetic fields generated, the size of the coil and power electronics needed are relatively large and their use in any intended application is limited.An improved method for detecting and quantifying the expression of fumarate hydratase and succinate dehydrogenase by mRNA level. The expression of fumarate hydratase (FH) and succinate dehydrogenase (SDH) is an important biomarker for the diagnosis and prognosis of thyroid neoplasms and other diseases. However, no standard method exists for detecting these enzymes at the mRNA level in biopsies taken from diseased tissues. We therefore analyzed RNA by reverse transcription-polymerase chain reaction (RT-PCR) using two sets of primers: one set that amplified mRNAs from both FH and SDH genes and the other that amplified the FH gene only
